As a student registered in the DWS/USOR Grant Program at Southern Utah University's Disability Resource Center, you have access to several resources which include but may not be limited to:

- o Access to a mentor who will assist you with your academic success. This mentor will assist with teaching you constructive study, organizational, and academic skills that will facilitate and complement your education.
- o Access to individualized professional development that will step you toward career readiness as well as to foster pre-internship professional skill development.
- o Access to paid internships in your career field. You will need to apply and attend the pre-internship professional development workshops and personal training sessions.

These benefits are offered to our students based on subjective need and will be available for approximately one academic year. In order to ensure that you have access to this program and all of the benefits provided, you will be required to follow the following guidelines:

- Meet in-person with your mentor once per week minimum. When unable to attend a meeting with your mentor, notify your mentor within two hours of the meeting time.
- Maintain regular contact and clear communication with your mentor.
- Meet with the professional development coordinator for individualized pre-internship skill instruction and training. (If an internship is desired.)

If guidelines are not adequately met, you will meet with the Grant Program Coordinator to discuss your eligibility for the program. If the Grant Program Coordinator feels that you are not able to meet the guidelines established for this program, you may be excused from receiving these support services.

By signing this document you acknowledge that you fully understand the guidelines for the DWS/USOR Grant Program and will do your best to meet all of the requirements listed above.

As a student registered into the DWS/USOR Grant Program at Southern Utah University's Disability Resource Center, you agree to the following:
