Reflecting on Situations in the School Library

It is vital that you customize the school library's procedures to the population you serve and to fit the resources available at your school. You can best serve your learning community when you incorporate solutions to procedural problems unique to your situation directly into the library policies.

As you brainstorm unique challenges that you face, try to determine whether or not the issues you address are general (recurring) or specific (a rare occurrence). Use your judgement to determine if the solution you define should be written into your policies and procedures.

State a change you would like to see or a challenge you face in the school library:	Is the situation General (recurring with different classes) or Specific (a rare occurrence and usually with individuals)? Please indicate using G or S.	Define any solutions (procedures) you could use to address the problem:
