

"I aim to inspire students to become leaders, no matter where they find themselves, so that they can, in turn, touch the lives of and inspire countless others to follow their dreams."

The Project

I have been working with a local highschool to create and run a leadership club for students who are underprivileged, who are first-generation Americans, or who plan to be the first in their families to attend college. The purpose of the club is to prepare students to have successful futures, no matter what their goals are.

The Inspiration

I faced many challenges as a first-generation college student and second-generation American, and I want to help students who are facing similar challenges succeed.

The Challenges

Trying to devote the time I want to the club while also meeting my other obligations has been very challenging. In truth, I am so excited by the possibilities of the club that I would devote nearly all my time to it if I could.

Benefit to Others

With this club, I aim to inspire the students to strive and work towards their dreams no matter what challenges they face. I also aim to inspire students to become leaders, no matter where they find themselves.

As they learn to persevere and serve others, they will create positive change in their own lives and in the lives of those around them.

Benefit to Myself

Working through this project has pushed me to step out of my comfort zones, and because of this experience, I dream bigger and feel more comfortable reaching further than I ever thought to before.

The doors of opportunity have burst open in front of me, and I can't wait to find out where they will lead.
