

The Adventure

Eliza Wilson

Outdoor Engagement Center

Spring 2013

EDGE PROJECT

Project Summary

For my project I wanted to help children experience the outdoors, show them the fun side to being active outside the house. I took five children on a hiking/camping trip. The point of this trip was to get them out and show them the fun in the outdoors.

Not only did the kids learn about the area we hiked in, but I also learned how fun it was to take children hiking. I enjoyed showing them new things and getting time outdoors with them.

Project Highlights

The best part of the trip was when the children saw the petroglyphs. They were so excited to see them, then when I told them what they were and how they had a story they wanted to make some of their own.... But I explained that they could not do this because of the history and meaning, we did not want to mess this site up.

From My Journal

“All went well and this was a great experience for me and hopefully for them. I will never forget this!”

This is the group that was involved in the adventure. They are sitting in front of the park entrance.

Joshua is pointing to the spines of a dead cactus that we found. This is just one of the neat things that they got to see on the trip.