

MOISES TREJO-GARCILAZO

COLLEGE OF EDUCATION AND HUMAN DEVELOPMENT
SENATOR

My name is Moises Trejo and I would love nothing more than to be your senator for the College of Education and Human Development. Much like what I want my future classroom to be like, I want to serve you. I am a first year sophomore who is majoring in mathematics education and some of my hobbies include reading books of any sort particularly math theories, exercising through sports, running, and lifting weights, participating in campus clubs and activities, and hanging out with friends.

I would like the focus of my campaign to be that of diversity. The reason I choose this particular platform is just due that the College of Education and Human Development having such a heavy emphasis on the concept of relationships when it comes to career paths and the skills developed for said career paths, it has been more than interesting seeing how others who didn't have the same upbringing/culture as me share their experiences in the courses that I have taken. It made me think how often we as people gloss over how our differences would make us see perspectives differently than in comparison to our peers and that's one of the most vital aspects of this position.

Positions of leadership are not something foreign to me given that I have previously served as executive council for LSA here within campus, I participated as sterling scholar for mathematics in high school, and I am currently serving as an official Utah Jazz ambassador for SUU as part of the Utah Jazz scholarship. The motivation for running for senate is that as a first year student I simply want to give SUU what it has given to me and that is two things. The first being an actual voice and having my opinion be known, and the second is that I want to be someone that any student of SUU can rely on. As senator, I would work night and day to ensure that students feel like they are being heard.

The following is a list of goals I strive to accomplish if elected as your College of Education and Human development senator.

- Diplomacy between the different colleges in campus in order to achieve the best for the student body through collaboration with the collaboration of the senate.
- Help spread interest in education and human development in campus for students with the aid of both professors and students majoring in said careers.
- Aiding the senate through input of students of diverse backgrounds such as BIPOC and LGBTQ+ to add some needed perspective speaking from the perspective of being a latino students
